AUDIT SCOPE:

Review of a conventional radish growing operation. The growing area audited includes approximately 65 acres in production with no irrigation used. The growing season typically runs from May through October, with two or three planting cycles per year. Water for spray mixing is sourced from offsite well at a central farm base. A crew of eight workers is used for the grower's various operations, but no workers were present during the audit inspection. Adjacent land use includes woodland/undeveloped, other agricultural production, the Gun River, and a gravel pit.
